Place Value

Stephen DeBacker

Abstract for 08 December 2016

The topic I chose to explore as part of this fall's Wolverine Pathway's adventure was place value. I definitely learned some things, and I hope the students we worked with did too. Place value is not something people typically spend much time thinking about after elementary school, but I now think that maybe we all should. This talk will begin with a presentation of some math tricks that are built on the idea of place value and build from there.
